

---

Confidence-dependent modulation of decision policy

Kobe Desender*<sup>1</sup>

<sup>1</sup>Universiteit Gent [Ghent] – Belgium

Abstract

Human decision making is accompanied by a sense of confidence about the accuracy of decisions.

Such decision confidence is hypothesized to influence behavior, yet direct evidence for this is lacking.

Building on accumulation-to-bound models of decision making, we show that both behavioral and neural measures of confidence affect subsequent decision policy.

---

*Speaker